#24 Start your 7 year trip around the world to do all things you have wanted to do before you die. (You have been prompted to do this as you have recently discovered you have lung cancer but you are deathly allergic to all known treatments.) 2 years into your travels you meet a team of young scientists in china who think they have a cure so you agree to be there test subject. 3 months later you are fully cured. You decide to continue your grand adventure to celebrate (plus you have already paid for it). When you finally return home you find that your shed has fallen down. After a few months you decide to clear the mess but in the process you step on a rusty nail. As you are used to being in agony because of the cancer you forget about the small injury. 5 weeks later you die from tetanus.
